

Jo Murphy

Jo has been in Asia for over 25 years, predominantly based in Hong Kong but with two valuable years spent in Singapore. She has held several senior Asia Pacific-wide management positions, successfully leading sales, business development, marketing and client relationship management divisions for major institutions; she has both built and managed large and effective regionally located teams and both established and overseen regional offices.

Jo was expatriated to Hong Kong, with Morgan Stanley (in early 1997) and has worked for several global institutions including HSBC Securities Services (previously Bank of Bermuda), Deutsche Asset Management, Triple A Partners, and most recently the CAIA Association where she was Managing Director and Head of APAC. Jo's roles have covered intermediary, buy and sell side, education and entrepreneurial groups, each with a focus on the alternative investment and private market sectors.

Jo enjoys the reputation of being hard-working, capable, committed and commercial; is a seasoned presenter and sought-out moderator regularly contributing to leading forums addressing topical aspects of the financial services sector, with a particular focus on the Asia Pacific private markets landscape. Jo was a founding member of the Hong Kong AIMA Chapter and previously held roles on both its Executive and Education Committees. Further, she also holds several corporate and NFP advisory positions, is a Fellow of the Singapore University of Social Sciences as well as an advisory council member of UPACA Gurukul (India) and is the Board Chair for the Financial Times FT Board Director Programme.
